

Jack Doherty Harboursing Vessels,
from £150 (dohertyporcelain.com)

Ali Tomlin
Cylinders, £48 each (alitomlin.com)

Harriet Levy-Cooper
Mountain Beaker, £35
(lazyglaze.co.uk)

Fenella Elms Two Tone Flows pot, £6,900 (fenella elms.com)

Jono Smart
coffee cups, £25 each (jonosmart.
co.uk)

Tilly Hemingway pots, from £35, at thepeanut
vendor.co.uk

Nathalie Domingo
Echo 34 bowl, £320
(nathaliedomingo.com)

CLAY TIME

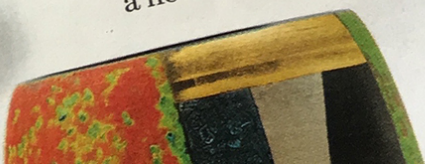

The British craft scene is flourishing – and, thanks to a rising number of passionate young potters, the smart money is on investing in ceramics this spring. We're craving pieces that serve a function but also stand alone as sculpture. What to look for? Organic structures, imperfections and minimal use of varnish – ageing, dripping and cracked edges are all on the agenda. Increasingly Londoners are leapfrogging the middle man and shopping directly from the artists' studios: the best assurance that your purchase is one of a kind. We recommend a visit to Hackney-based Ben Sutton, whose sleek Japanese x Scandi crockery will bring a new dimension to dinner time.

Ben Sutton
Cocoon vases, from £35
(bensuttonceramics.com)

Nichols

Adam Frew mug, £30
(adamfrew.com)

